Analysis

The document provides a comprehensive overview of child labor laws in Nepal, including international and national regulations. It highlights the minimum age for admission to employment and the responsibilities of employers to ensure the safety and welfare of children in the workplace. The document is an important resource for legal professionals and practitioners working in the field of child labor.
The document is a Rapid Reference Card for ILO Recommendation No. 190 on the Worst Forms of Child Labour. It contains tables and lists of sections and articles relevant to the topic. The card is organized in a tabular format with sections and subsections, providing a quick reference for the user. The document is bilingual, with sections in both English and Nepali. The card includes references to the ILO Convention on the Worst Forms of Child Labour (1999) and other relevant legal instruments. The card appears to be a part of a larger project led by Winrock International and funded by the United States Department of Labor.
The content of the image is not clearly legible due to the quality of the scan. It appears to be a page from a document discussing the worst forms of child labor in Nepal, referencing various legal and policy documents, and providing statistics. The text is dense and technical, with numerous references to legal statutes and international agreements.

Nepal Children's Act, 2048 (1992)

The Nepal Children's Act, 2048 (1992) identifies a child as anyone below the age of 14 years. This act provides protection and rights to children, including from exploitation and harm. It criminalizes child labor and sets out penalties for violators.

This act, effective from 2060, further strengthens the protection of children by imposing stricter penalties on employers who engage children in hazardous work. It also mandates government action in identifying and rescuing children in labor.

Nepal Central Bureau of Statistics, "Annual Household Survey (2013/14)"

This survey provides comprehensive data on child labor prevalence in Nepal, detailing demographics, sectors, and the types of work involved. The data is crucial for policy makers in designing effective interventions to combat child labor.

Clear II Project

The Clear II project, led by Winrock International and funded by the United States Department of Labor, aims to reduce child labor through policy advocacy and law enforcement. It emphasizes the importance of legislative and regulatory frameworks in combatting child labor.
